2022 National Postal Forum – Final Opportunity for Registration Discounts

Register now for the 2022 National Postal Forum and receive eligible discounts for the mailing and industry trade show, taking place May 15-18, 2022, in Phoenix, AZ. Many customers have already taken advantage of the first opportunity in three years to register for an in-person gathering of the mailing and shipping industry's largest trade show, networking, and educational event.

The theme for this year's NPF is all "Facing the Future Together" and attendees will have the opportunity to hear Postmaster General Louis DeJoy and his Executive Leadership Team present on key initiatives taking place that are transforming the Postal Service. Highlights include:

- The PMG's Keynote Address, which will provide updates and insights into the Delivering for America Plan, supported by highly informative ELT/Officer presentations that expand on related topics
- There will be 100+ educational workshops and two Professional Certification Courses
- The Exhibit Hall returns with 100+ vendors to interact with and supply chain products to observe
- Four nightly networking events to engage with peers and colleagues

This year's motivational speaker is Adam Steltzner, who as Chief Engineer for NASA on many launches, will share his experiences with organizational transformation and leadership.

The USPS Consultation Center returns to the Exhibit Hall where customers can receive individual education and advice regarding their business needs. Similarly, Peer-to-Peer Roundtables are back as well, where attendees can listen intimately to Industry and Postal experts dive deep into various topics du jour.

All of this is still available to you at a discounted rate if you register online by April 29, 2022. Once the deadline has passed, you must register at the door in Phoenix, and you will miss out on significant savings.

For information on how you can receive discounts, send an email to NPFFeedback@usps.gov.
