11.2, fifth sentence

The USPS does not at this time endorse any particular electronic alternate methods for verification of client identity. Any electronic system that meets these requirements is sufficient. The Licensee will decide what methods best suit their business needs and address their business risk, while still maintaining the appropriate PAF information. Licensee may implement multiple methods for verification based on the Licensee's business needs.

11.2.2, added new section and renumbered subsequent sections

In the event the USPS, at its sole discretion, determines a Licensee is not diligently verifying the identity and role all parties involved in the transaction (including, but not limited to, brokers and list owners) when using equivalent electronic methods, the USPS reserves the right to require the Licensee revert to the traditional paper method of PAF completion. Any method used by a Licensee for verification under this new ruling applies ONLY to PAF collection under the NCOA^{Link} Full Service License Agreement. There is no implied or implicit application of this ruling to ANY relationship, practice or agreement between the USPS and the Licensee. The USPS offers a wide range of services to its customers, and separately sets the appropriate requirements for each of these services, including electronic processes.
